While the sprouting of potatoes under ordinary conditions is very objectionable they may be so sprouted as to materially advance their earliness, says an exchange. This is done by placing them end down in single layers in shallow trays on the floor in a light and moderately warm room. Thus placed they will send out short, stubby green sprouts which will remain in that condition for weeks. Such potatoes, planted without breaking the sprouts, will grow immediately and produce an early crop.

Maj. P. P. Johnston, of the Democratic State Central Committee has issued a call for a meeting of the Committee to be held at Lexington next Wednesday to elect a member of the Committee to take the place of Senator Wm. Goebel resigned. At the same time and place the Democratic State Executive Committee will meet and fix time and place for holding the Democratic State Convention which will nominate candidates for State officers.

There was an attempt to wreck the Louisville Dispatch made by five of the stock holders, whose stock amounted to $400, last week. They brought suit to have the paper put in the hands of a receiver claiming that the paper was being run at a great loss. They were unsuccessful in their attempt, however, refusing to make a necessary affidavit to make the suit stick. This unsuccessful attempt to destroy the Dispatch brought about a financial statement of the Dispatch Publishing Co. which showed the paper to be in a very prosperous condition.

This from the Lancaster Record is equally applicable to Estil and every other county in the State as well as Garrard: "A Representative should neither be non-representative nor a misrepresentative. The time is drawing nigh to select candidates for the legislature, or rather near at hand for men to select themselves as candidates for the place. It is devoutly hoped that the people will put on studying caps before deciding upon a man to represent this county. There will be matters of the gravest importance to come before the next Assembly, and none but good men should be elected. This thing of electing Tom, Dick or Harry has proven to be a bad policy, and the people should awake to the importance of the matter and send a man who is well educated and informed on public matters. Any block-head can warm the seat, but the question is will he know what will be the best to do for the people. Pick out good men, gentlemen, and let this county Representative be a leader and not a follower.

A fac-simile of the first page Covington Ledger containing the article that was alleged to have been written by Goebel, and which brought on the difficulty that resulted in the death of Sanford is being circulated by parties unknown. Such methods of campaigning should be condemned. It is cowardly to sneak and do dirt in the dark, and a man's personal affairs have no business being thrust into a political contest. The fact that Haldeman, Weaver and "Cousin" Henry Stone are for Goebel is enough to bury him politically, face downward, forever. Cold, crafty, pulseless, soulless, bloodless, designing Goebel will never occupy the Governor's chair in Kentucky. Probably he might succeed in Ohio, where his investments are. Such men as he may thrive in the atmosphere that oxygenizes such carcasses as Cox, Hanna and McKinley, but in chivalrous, open-hearted Kentucky, never. I am told that although a wealthy man, Goebel hasn't enough property in Kentucky to flag a hand-car if the whole was invested in red calico.—Ex.

Farmers, who now realize more readily than any body else that spring is here, is greatly behind with their work. There has been no plowing done yet, and the fencing and clearing is greatly behind. I have been afflicted with rheumatism for fourteen years and nothing seemed to give any relief. I was able to be around all the time, but constantly suffering. There has been so many untruthful charges made against the Louisville Dispatch, the only Democratic paper in Louisville, that if any thing they should accuse it of was really true, the Democrats of Kentucky could not hardly be made believe it. Its bitter enemies are doing for its advancement by trying to wreck it, more than the paper could do for itself in any other way.

It is a notable fact that many good items are lost to the newspapers every week by the modesty of the people who hesitate to tell the editor matters concerning themselves. The right thing to do is to courteously stop the newspaper man on the street, or any other place you may see him, and tell him you have been on a visit, have relatives visiting you, that you and your wife have a new baby at the house, or that your wife entertained friends, or anything that is in anyway a matter of news. If you have done anything mean keep that to yourself, for he always knows it; there are others who make it their business to tell about.—Ex.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

This remedy is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough and influenza. It has become famous for its cures of these diseases, over a large part of the civilized world. The most startling testimonials have been received, giving accounts of its good works; of the aggravating and persistent coughs it has cured; of severe colds that have yielded promptly to its soothing effects, and of the dangerous attacks of croup it has cured, often saving the life of the child. The extensive use of it for whooping cough has shown that it robs that disease of all dangerous consequences. It is especially prized by mothers for their children, as it never fails to effect a speedy cure, and because they have found that there is not the least danger in giving it, even to babies, as it contains nothing injurious. Good Religion.

The religion which makes people pay their debts; the religion which keeps people from speaking ill of their neighbors; the religion which makes no distinction between poverty and wealth; the religion which makes men manly and women womanly; the religion which is a part of one's everyday life exemplified in kind deeds, loving acts and cheering words, is religion which is needed in the world today. Have you got it?—Ex.

During their bondage, the colored people always enjoyed religious freedom and many of them were church members. Not particularly inclined to ablutions they all believed in immersion. On one occasion when a number of converts were being baptised in a deep pond, the preacher lost his hold on a stout young man, who came near being drowned and saved his life by swimming to the shore. Sitting down upon a stump and shaking himself, he exclaimed: "Some gentleman's nigger is gwine ter git drowned by dis dam foolishness yit."—Harrodsburg Sayings.

If a man was to give another an orange, he would simply say, "I give you this orange;" but when the transaction is entrusted to the hands of a lawyer to put in writing he adopts this form: "I hereby give, grant and convey to you all and singular my estate and interest, title and claim and advantages in and of said orange together with all its rind, skin, juice, pulps, pips and all rights and advantages therein, with full power to bite, cut, suck and otherwise eat the same orange, or give the same away without the rind, skin, juice, pulps or pips, anything herein, before or hereafter, or in any other deed or deeds, instruments of what nature or kind soever to the contrary in anywise, notwithstanding."—Ex.

This is a period of curious development in politics. Andrew Carnegie, plutocrat, and Dr. Parkhurst, puritan, are ready to support W. J. Bryan for President on a platform opposing imperialism. Oliver H. P. Belmont, the millionaire clubman of New York, has started a weekly paper advocating the income tax. President McKinley has been advocating the doctrine of peace and good will between the sections and has worn a Confederate badge. And "Granny" Hoar, of Massachusetts, once a subscriber to the doctrine that the Constitution with slavery in it was a covenant with hell, now boldly proclaims that the downfall of the republic will date from the accession of William McKinley to the Presidency. Gen. Joe Wheeler, one of the few surviving Lieutenant Generals of the Confederacy, and a life-long Democrat, declares that the country owes a debt of gratitude to McKinley, which can only be discharged by unanimously electing him to a second term in the White House; and Bryan and Cleveland have come together on a platform opposing annexation.—Carlisle Mercury.

To remember the names of persons is commonly regarded as the first necessary qualification of politicians. Oftentimes, however, they go too far in trying to master this art, and so fall into amusing blunders. Senator Vest relates this story at the expense of one of his senatorial associates. In some way, he says, the senator, who was usually good at remembering names, had forgotten that of a county chairman, and so bluntly asked it. "Why," said the young chairman, in offended dignity, "I'm Jones! I thought you knew me." "Of course I do," replied the senator, quickly, "but which one of Mr. Jones' sons are you? I know your father well for years." "And he had only one son," was the unsympathetic reply.

The flag floating over the White house in Washington indicates to all who see it that the president is at home. Whenever he is out of that city the flag is carefully folded away. The same custom prevails at the capitol. Whenever either house of congress is in session the flag flies over the wing of the building which that house occupies. If there is an evening session a bright light in the dome tells the story. This is, in Washington, what might be termed the "language of the flag."

Because his betrothed eloped with another man, Basil Haydon, a Washington county man made a vow that he would never put his foot on the ground again. That was thirty-eight years ago and although he is in good health and owns a farm, he has never been out of the house since, attended to his business through a trusted servant.—Winchester Democrat.

A model husband lives in this community. He never allows his wife to do more than half the work. In the summer time she puts up the canned fruit, and in the winter he puts it down.—Sharpsburg World.

Nobody will use other people's experience nor has any of his own until it is too late to use it.
